CHINA: THE GREAT CULTURAL MIX [WENG-CHINA- 1976]
MP1890 SCG COLOR SOUND 17 P U Only
Covers the disintegration of the Han empire, the formation of new dynasties, and new developments in religion and art (220 A.D. to 581 A.D.) through a variety of artifacts, documents, and art materials. Explains that after the Han dynasty China was divided into three kingdoms - Wu, Shu-Han, and Wei, but warring among them decimated the population and the Emperor allowed non-Chinese tribes inside the Great Wall. Observes the evolution of the empire into the era called Northern and Southern Dynasties (386-589 A.D.) and compares the influence of Buddhism and Confucianism. Indicates that achievements in the arts, sciences, and technology reached historical heights and the North and South gradually merged into a new Chinese tradition. (Variant title: The Great Cultural Mix). CHINESE HISTORY SERIES (ART, CHINESE; CHINA--HISTORY)

CHINA: THE HEAVENLY KHAN [WENG-CHINA-1976]
MP1920 SCG COLOR SOUND 23 P U Only
Covers the cultural exchanges between China and neighboring and foreign countries (618 A.D. to 907 A.D.) through a variety of artifacts, documents, and art materials. Observes that T'ang China multiplied its international relationships through trade and cultural exchange; relationships spread to Central Asia, the Near East, and India; diplomatic contact was made with the Arabs; and trade extended south to Sumatra and Java. Records the foreign influences which shaped China and the spread of Chinese culture to other nations. (Variant title: The Heavenly Khan). CHINESE HISTORY SERIES (WORLD HISTORY; ART, CHINESE; CHINA--HISTORY)

CHINESE LEGENDS, GODS, AND PROPHETS [GLIM- 1974]

Features Dr. Jacob Bronowski offering his personal view of the dilemma confronting science and mankind: there is no absolute knowledge. Using the face of Stephan Borgrajewicz, compares the limited information obtainable with physics' most precise instrumentation to that supplied by artistic interpretation. Traces the "principle of uncertainty" from Karl Friedrich Gauss' early discoveries in estimating star positions to Werner Heisenberg's work at Gottingen University on characterizing the electron. Expands the concept of knowledge within a certain tolerance to all human communication of ideas and points out the irony of Nazi dogma arising just as science realized there are no absolutes. Illustrates the moral dilemma faced by modern scientists with the story of Leo Szilard's struggle to prevent the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Concludes with a visit to Auschwitz, Bronowski's symbol of monstrous certainty in man's quest for absolute knowledge and power. Guide with objectives and questions included. A text and other supplementary materials is available in "The Ascent of Man Kit" (KT 192).
